MARCH 2021

OUR APPROACH TO ARTIST SUPPORT

At Polyphony Arts, we support performers and composers in achieving the fullest careers they can.

Covid-19 and the resulting lockdown have taught us a lot about how best to support musicians.

We believe that the best careers are achievable when musicians are happy and fulfilled by their work and fees.

We work closely with the artists we support in a collaborative approach to realise the best possible results.

We want a classical music industry that works for the people in it – not the other way around.

Our podcast, Music Works, examines the future of classical music through a series of interviews with industry leaders, and a series of micropodcasts focusing on mindset in the music business. Have a listen to get to know us.

WE'RE A PERFECT FIT FOR YOU IF...

- You want to take an active role in furthering your career, and want an artist management team who will help you find and sustain your career strategy
- You want to engage with and develop your personal network through all possible methods, both digitally and in person
- You want management who understand not just the nuts and bolts of the industry, but also the role that mindset and mental barriers such as imposter syndrome and money mindset can play in your success
- You are passionate about equality, diversity and inclusivity in classical music, and want to play a part in the industry becoming fairer and better
- You want to stay in control of your career direction, with strategic support available for the big picture and for those tricky moments
- You want representation from a team that understands the reasons you make music, and how it fits into your life as a whole.
